

Dadul's life

Dadul grew up in the valley named Laddakh situated in the north of India.

In the summer the temperature is 30°C and the winter, the temperature is -30°C . In this village, the habitants don't use modern tools to the agriculture. It's an archaic agriculture. For the school, children studie in the nature under trees. The teacher come from the nearest town. He takes 2 days to come in this small village because there isn't road for car . The winter is so cold that there is no school in winter, the children help their farmers parents in the mountains.

At ten years old he left his family for studing with the monks, he did monastic studies. Every week-end he went to a monastery. At sixteen years old he left his monastory life.

After this he left travel in India. He discovered cars ,traffic, trains and planes and the said "Someting normal for us".

At twenty years old his father died so he became the man of his family. He organized the ceremony of his sister's wedding. For him it was very difficult because he was too young.

After this he worked as an ammo carrier across India. Next he became a tourist guide in India and after this he came in Europe more precisely in Spain to do Erasmus. Now he lives in Bordeaux and he organizes travel in India thanks to his association named Lungta. This association takes care of building schools in his natural village and other school equipment.

Photo numéro 1 : Wikipédia.com

Photo numéro 2 : wanderingeducators.com

Photo numéro 3 : travel.paintedstork.com

Photo numéro 4 : dreamstime.com

Photo numéro 5 : Namaste-india.over-blog.fr

Photo numéro 6 : belgium4tibet.wordpress.com